Legal Problems in Water Resources

This issue contains a number of the presentations made during the Conference on Legal Problems in Water Resources sponsored by the School of Law at Berkeley, May 15, 16, and 17, 1957. Some of these contributions have been substantially expanded by the authors and most reflect extensive annotations of the original manuscripts of the addresses delivered.

Additional presentations to the Conference were made by Bert L. Smith and Ralph M. Brody, both on the current posture of the California areas-of-origin problem; by Frank B. Clendenen, on the physical and economic aspects of ground water problems; and in a dinner address by Hatfield Chilson, Under Secretary of the Interior. The texts of these appear in the proceedings of the Conference, which are being published by the Statewide Committee on Research in Water Resources, of the University of California. These proceedings include also a paper prepared by S. T. Harding in 1931, which was an addendum to the manuscript of the address by Charles E. Corker, whose article appears at page 604.

The program was developed with the assistance of a committee, whose contributions during the planning stage, by way of suggestions and advice, were invaluable. The School of Law is most particularly appreciative of the cooperation of the participants, who gave generously of their own time and energy to assure the success of the Conference. This success has been measured by the substantial attendance during the meetings and in continued expressions of interest in their proceedings.

Finally, especial credit is due Dr. Helen V. Hammarberg, Head, Department of Conferences and Special Activities, University Extension, and her associates for their effective planning and execution of the details of the Conference.
